HARLAN IS NAMED

Oyster Bay, Aug. 17.—President Roosevelt today filled the last vacancy in the Interstate Commerce Commission by appointing James S. Harlan, a Chicago lawyer and a son of Justice John M. Harlan, of the United States Supreme Court. Coincident with the announcement of the appointment it was learned that the President had selected Mr. Harlan for the place "several weeks ago," but deemed it best to withhold the fact from publication until this time.

Harlan is credited with having an extensive law practice in Chicago. He gave it up in January, 1901, to become Attorney-General of Porto Rico, which place he held until the summer of the following year, when he resigned. Former Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, held up the confirmation of Harlan's appointment to this office for five days. Pettigrew openly charged the Administration with giving Harlan the appointment in order to influence Justice Harlan's vote in the Supreme Court, which had then before it most important Porto Rican legislation.

The appointment of a son of Justice McKenna to a majority in the army, over the heads of 118 other officers, was also criticized at that time on the same grounds. Pettigrew considered that the appointment of these two Justices' sons to high offices at such a juncture in public affairs was "indecent."
